Customer Reviews

Bhakti Mathur's love for books started at a very young age. Her mother was a librarian, and as a child she ended up spending many hours in the library. Work brought Bhakti and her husband to Hong Kong in 2001 and coming from the hustle and bustle of Delhi and Mumbai, they settled in immediately and the city is now truly home. The idea for the Amma, Tell Me series came as a way to introduce her older son, Shiv, to Indian mythology and festivals. The name Klaka came from Shiv himself. One day he came back home from school one day and announced that "Shiv" didn't cut it and he should be henceforth be addressed only as Klaka! She started her career as an investment banker. After a couple of other roles in the finance world, she ended up as a private banker, and now currently works for a major Asian bank.

This has been another great addition to my Son's collection from Ms.Mathur. The origins of Hanuman have been beautifully told in Part 1 of this series. The illustrator has done a brill job, they do a great job keeping my son engaged. The story can be a bit wordy for my 3 yr old, he loses patience and wants to move on to the next page, but this is not all bad, since it gives him more room to grow with this book. I wish these books were sold in sets for a more reasonable price, that's really the only complaint. I'll be buying the Part 2 for Diwali this year.
