In its centuries of history, Baton Rouge has been at the crossroads of cultures. Nowhere is this more apparent than in the city's dwellings and establishments. Generations of innovation and preservation are clearly seen in the diverse structures of the city. From the public splendor of Louisiana State University to the meticulous care taken to restore the Rabalais House, this gorgeous book pays homage to the architectural jewels of one of the nation's most remarkable cities. Sweeping photographs of each grand edifice accompany histories of the address and its residents. Details of architectural features are highlighted. Each structure is both a product of its era and a reflection of later cultural influences.
