Michelin's map of Ireland was a most welcome companion on our trip through western Ireland. On a tour, having a good, clear map makes it an easy matter to keep track of what's where as your bus lumbers along lovely but narrow byways and hangs on by its fingernails as we drive along coastal cliffs. And afterwards, a detailed, marked map makes captioning one's gobs of pictures a very easy matter.

We used this map in combination with our GPS this summer for a driving trip around Ireland. It is a large map so we cut it in half in order to manage it better. It is great to give you an overview of where you are going and how far it is between points of interest. However, I would not rely on it for actual "at the moment" driving directions. Because it is so large and covers the whole country, you really cannot see the roads and road numbers well enough. But, paired with GPS it was really helpful because, as you know, you cant really get an overall picture with GPS.

Huge map. Hung on the wall and highlighted routes and wrote notes on our upcoming trip. Also highlighted towns where our ancestors are from so we could organize trips to cemeteries. Great quality as expected. Used on the road everyday which was great so the girls could learn some map skills since we didn't have GPS or wifi for our iPhones!

this is just what I was looking for. a up to date road map of Ireland.the best I have found

This map is made out of very thin paper and just too big. This isn't a good map for using in a car. Buy a book type atlas if you need it for driving. If you manage the map too much it will rip. I have it hanging on my wall and plan on pinning our future trip to Ireland. I don't usually post negative reviews, but I feel like this map is just about useless. I can't imagine even using this in a hotel room. It's huge!

This map, like all Michelin maps, is excellent and very detailed. Only complaint as others have pointed out, is that it is very large and unwieldy to handle. I have often cut their maps into pieces to make them functional once I am on the road.

We are headed to Ireland in August. This map worked perfect for us. We planned out the route for our trip using it. Very pleased with it.

This is a GIANT map. Far too unwieldy for travel. Ended up photocopying sections to use during travel. It was good to plan but it remained in our suitcases.
